INFORMED CONSENT DECISIONS

Informed Consent: is the ability to consider relevant information, weigh risks and benefits and arrive at a knowing and voluntary decision. (Failure to make a decision the provider would have made does not, by itself, mean the person is not capable of giving informed consent).

TYPES OF GUARDIANSHIP OR CONSERVATORSHIP APPOINTMENTS

1. Full guardianship: provides the guardian with decision-making authority and responsibility over the protected person's personal affairs, including but not limited to, medical, legal, habilitation, employment, and educational matters.
2. Limited guardianship: provides a guardian with decision-making authority and responsibility over only selected areas that the person has been determined by the court as unable to manage. For example, a limited guardianship might only apply to health care decisions.
3. Joint guardianship: (also referred to as Co-guardianship) involves more than one person acting as the person's guardian at the same time and sharing in the decision-making authority and responsibilities that accompanies guardianship.
4. Conservatorship: provides a conservator with decision-making authority to manage, protect, and preserve the protected person's estate and finances. As with guardianship, a conservatorship may be full, limited, temporary or joint.
5. Temporary guardianship (emergency): arranges for the temporary care, protection, and support for a person in need of immediate help. Temporary guardianship or conservatorship is appointed only for a 90-day period if it is shown that an immediate need exists and following the regular court procedures could result in significant harm to the person.

LEAST RESTRICTIVE

Examples of less restrictive alternatives to guardianship or conservatorship include:

- Community based services providing training to a person in specific areas;
- Case Management services;
- Utilizing a family member, friend, or advocate willing to assist the person by attending meetings, medical appointments, and having regular contact;
- Representative payee for government benefits, power of attorney, advance directives for health care; and
- Trust account for Social Security back payments, inheritance, settlements, etc.

What less restrictive alternatives to guardianship or conservatorship have been attempted and what were the results?

Please describe specific reasons or the circumstances which led you to apply now:

Have you contacted anyone else about becoming this person's guardian and/or conservator? If not, and there are possible candidates, you must do so before proceeding with this application. If the answer is yes, describe your efforts including who you contacted and when, their relationship to the person referred, and the response to your request.

List the names and last known information of any known relatives, spouse, guardian, conservators, advocate, foster parents, or other persons involved in this person's life, past and present (other than those providing direct care). Use additional page if necessary.
